

The National Youth Orchestras of Scotland (NYOS) works with children and young people from the ages of 3 to 28, providing around 400 students each year with an inspiring world-class musical experience.

From our Young Years project working with nursery and primary school children to our senior ensembles working on the most complex scores, NYOS provides accessible and inclusive music education opportunities for talented young musicians throughout Scotland, regardless of their economic circumstances or geographical location. Through our eight different performing ensembles and various training courses and workshops, we are unique within Europe in providing a breadth of experience in both classical and jazz music for all of our students.

Our students are proud and excited to be playing with The National Youth Orchestras of Scotland and we are committed to developing their talent, confidence and life-long passion for music.
