The National Youth Orchestras of Scotland (NYOS) works with children and young people from the ages of 8 to 28, providing around 400 students each year with an inspiring musical experience.

From our young years project working with primary school children, to our senior ensembles working on the most complex scores, NYOS provides a world-class learning experience to young Scottish musicians of all ages. Through our eight different performing ensembles and various training courses and workshops, we are unique within Europe in providing a breadth of experience in both classical and jazz music for all of our students.

Our students are proud and excited to be playing with The National Youth Orchestras of Scotland and we are passionate about developing their talent, confidence and life-long passion for music.

NYOS residential courses and outreach programmes would not be possible without fundraised income. Student fees are heavily subsidised with bursaries available to all applicants and we are proud to ensure that no eligible young musician is denied access to our projects on the grounds of financial or geographical limitations.

Each year NYOS must raise over £500,000 to secure the future of these imperative projects, which ensure Scotland's musical future. We can only provide these opportunities with your help.
